DEDICATION

This book is dedicated to the founder and pastor of the Household of Faith Church in Benton, Arkansas, Pastor Bob Joyce. His Bible teaching is loving, mature, relevant, and profoundly anointed with the Holy Spirit!

Pastor Bob is being used of God in modern times, much like the apostle Paul was in his day. Every word he speaks, every song he sings and plays, exudes the attributes of a man who has died to self and lives solely to glorify the Lord Jesus.

I never thought I would live to see a pastor conduct himself with simultaneous confidence and humility, strength and meekness. But then there is Pastor Joyce. It is evident to me that God prepared this leader his entire life to become one of God's 5-Star Generals of the Faithful Remnant in these last days.

Visiting Heaven is dedicated to Pastor Bob Joyce, purified by fire, leading by example, for such a time as this.

FOREWORD

BY RANDY KAY

When Dale Black first shared with me his story about Heaven, I became instantly mesmerized, not only because this true story offers a compelling account, but it also resonated with me in a very personal way. I too died and met Jesus in Heaven.

Over the course of years now, I have interviewed numerous individuals who have died and entered the afterlife, many of whom, including Dale, have been on our television show, vodcasts, and afterlife conferences. I think that I have now interviewed the most Christ-honoring afterlife accounts on social media.

What uniquely struck me about Dale's account was an instant respect for this amazing man. I also related with his experience as being real and authentic. Both in my spirit and through my own heavenly journey, I can confirm that Dale's story and descriptions are without a doubt true and foretelling of what believers in Jesus as their Lord and Savior can expect after they leave this world.

Within Visiting Heaven: Heavenly Keys to a Life Without Limitations., Dale brilliantly combines glued-to-the-page storytelling and captivating revelations of Heaven (and hell) in an entertaining and transforming narrative. Some of what Dale Black shares in this book are fresh accounts that, to my knowledge, have not previously been shared publicly. For example, I, like many others, knew that Capt. Dale Black operated as a successful pilot, and some know that God miraculously restored his sight to qualify as a pilot, but did you know that in the emergency room after a fatal plane crash, Dale and his copilot who died, struggled with terrifying evil forces? Did you know about the angelic guides that accompanied Dale on his journey and the singular insights these spiritual beings and God revealed to Dale? How about the city of Heaven that Dale viewed and describes in breathtaking detail? These and other deep insights are sure to build your faith and wisdom.

As a fellow sojourner in Heaven and a researcher of afterlife experiences, I can testify that Dale's descriptions are not only accurate, but his writings also combine Dale's heavenly insights with a practical application of how we can live more abundantly in this life. For example, Dale explains that his experience has "sown the promise [of God] in [his] heart." He references this pearl of wisdom to persevere for the lost "until he is found."

Anyone who glimpses Heaven can appreciate the grander purpose God intends for us, but it takes a gifted teacher like Dale to impart a revelation to the reader so that he or she can live more faithfully as "unto the Lord," as it says in Colossians 3:23.

Yes, Captain Dale Black offers some seasoned descriptions of his worldwide flight journeys and a breathtaking journey of flying within the heavenlies, but the reader's takeaway should be what Heaven teaches us. Dale learned that "communication was heart to heart, not through the ears and mind.” Indeed, communication in Heaven is heart to heart, as it should be in this world. Dale explains some of these heart-to-heart meetings during his missionary journeys. I think it is important to hear how an emissary from Heaven like Dale, brings Heaven’s impartation through his earthly service to God in contrast to how we are commonly trained to behave in this world.

Heaven changes you. It colors every action on earth with the flavor of God’s mission in the moments and events of life. Ultimately in this book, Dale brings Heaven to the reader’s world, and that inevitably will change you, mold you into the person God wants you to be to faithfully serve out the purpose God has ordained for you.

Visiting Heaven will take off on literal “runways” to Russia, Africa, and ultimately to Heaven, and it will bring you to a personal engagement with Dale and his wonderful wife, Paula. After Dale’s sojourn in Heaven, he and his wife struggled through a near fatal battle with cancer, and they co-authored an uplifting book titled Life, Cancer and God: Healing Your Body, Soul, & Spirit. Of course, Captain Dale Black also wrote the best-selling book Flight to Heaven. I love both books, and I think this newest book from Dale serves as the culmination of so many life lessons mixed with his breakthrough experience in Heaven.

I have found that it takes many years for afterlife survivors to fully assimilate the lessons learned from their afterlife encounters. It takes the rest of their lifetimes after returning from Heaven to allow the Holy Spirit to illuminate the reasons why God returned them to this world. Dale has discovered those answers.

VISITING HEAVEN

Most of us who have been to Heaven do not want to return to this broken world, but invariably God returns His beloved from Heaven to this world to fulfill a profound purpose. It may sound trite to say that this general purpose is to convey the love of God to a fallen world, but the truth is that few, in my experience, are equipped with the narrative-writing skill to cut through the scintillation of explaining Paradise to convey a deeper meaning to it all. Dale Black is one of those rare individuals who can tell a story entertainingly while embedding it with a richness that leads to true revelation—and that leads to a transformation of the heart.

On a personal note, Dale is a special friend to me because we both have seen into the heart of God, and that brings us together in both understanding and appreciation in a way that, quite frankly, can only be fully appreciated by those who have experienced Heaven in the afterlife. We also tend to reflect the raw emotion that comes from being in the presence of God, and I find a special koinonia with my friend because of our kindred experiences. The good news is, you will experience that same wonder after you depart this life; and you can catch a glimpse of it in this book.

Also, Dale is one of those Christian leaders who stands on the Rock (Jesus) so faithfully, that he can speak prophetically about God's plans without being at the mercy of the shifting nature of this world. He is truly a man of integrity and honor and faithfulness and intellect and wisdom and discernment. He is God's man.

You need to read or hear what Dale says because he speaks as a messenger of truth with heavenly insight. I am so honored to write the foreword of a book that I know will transform lives. I pray a blessing over you as you escape into the pages of Visiting Heaven.

PROLOGUE

On July 18, 1969, I boarded a commuter airplane with two other pilots. I was just nineteen—a brash young pilot in flight training. Moments later, my life would be forever altered. Just after takeoff, we violently and ironically, crashed into a cemetery’s seven-story-high air mausoleum dedicated to famous pilots.

I was the only survivor.

Following this fatal airplane crash and during three days in a coma, I took an uncharted visit to Heaven. This presented its own problem. I’m trained as an engineer. I was raised in a business world where logic ruled. An experience of the heart was well outside my comfort zone. I had no desire to operate in the realm of the unprovable.

This line of thinking was confirmed by my grandfather when I shared with him the story of my heavenly journey immediately after my memory returned. He cautioned me about telling others. “Dale, if your experience really is sacred, then why not keep it to yourself? Instead of telling others about it, why not live your life in a way that reflects your journey to Heaven? Live what you believe you saw. Live what you believe you heard and learned. Dale, your life’s actions might speak louder than your words.”

VISITING HEAVEN

And then, not long after the crash, I attended a church service where a man claimed to have died, visited Heaven, and came back to life. I found the service more sensational than sacred. The very essence of Heaven is God and His glory, yet the people seemed more interested in the man with his sensational story than the One who created it all and whom Heaven is all about. My decision not to discuss my journey with anyone was further solidified, and I made a solemn vow to myself and to God not to share my experience with anyone unless and until God made it crystal-clear to do so.

As time went on, another reason for remaining silent about Heaven presented itself. Perhaps it became the main reason: Have I really lived as a reflection of Heaven? At various times in my life, I have been truly disappointed in myself. Since I believe I have clearly seen Heaven and was so dramatically changed by the experience, why did I fail again and again to be the man I believed God wanted me to be? Why did I often fall short of being the reflection of what I had seen and heard and learned? It would take me decades to come to grips with the fact that, notwithstanding my glimpse into the eternal, I am human and a very flawed human at that.

Whereas I had at one time determined to leave the story only for my children and grandkids, it has become clear that God intended for me to share it more broadly. Like Jonah in the Bible, I have resisted. I have wrestled fiercely against the idea and have lost many nights of sleep. However, I am fully persuaded that God has instructed me to make my entire heavenly journey public. In my heart, I did fulfill my vow. For over forty years, I lived my experience rather than talked about it. I sure tried anyway.

After having flown and worked and ministered for over four decades before telling this story, I've raised a family who learned about a loving God and much about His Word. I completed my vocational assignments. Now past retirement age, I believe I have been instructed by the Lord to revisit my journey to Heaven and share the entire story. You may find that believable, or you may not. Just as you may or may not find the story itself believable. This is perfectly understandable. After all, I did have massive head injuries from the crash. I was on pain medication. It would be easy and convenient to imagine these as reasons for the story I am about to relate.

And yet what I experienced was so real to me that my entire life and the way I lived it changed completely and permanently. Yes, sometimes the logical engineer in me comes out and challenges what my mind remembers, but in all these years, my heart has never questioned. My heart has always believed. And my heart always wins.

I suppose it's a bit like being in love. Does love always make sense? Of course not. But that doesn't mean it doesn't change you. For those of you who have experienced the new birth, perhaps it can be likened to salvation. You wonder sometimes intellectually if you're really saved. If so, how can you continue being so human, so flawed? And yet you know, in your heart, that everything changed when you surrendered your life to Jesus Christ.

For me, on that July day in 1969, my life was turned upside down. My priorities were turned inside out. My focus turned toward eternity rather than the trappings of this world. Since then, I volunteered on almost a thousand ministry flights to more than fifty countries—helping to build churches, orphanages, and medical clinics. I've trained and led teams of lay ministers and medical personnel to help the needy worldwide at my own expense. Every major decision I have made—including giving up an airline career, selling our personal multimillion-dollar aviation business, and donating those funds into the ministry—was a direct result of my journey to Heaven.

Those who have known me might now well understand why I've seemed like a bit of a misfit, why my life has often followed an offbeat, even illogical path.

If my experience was merely a dream, why has it continued wielding its powerful influence for over half a century? Why wouldn't it simply fade away? Why, for just a dream, would one sacrifice reputation, career, financial security, and more? Why would one continue making major life choices that result in great personal cost?

That brings us to this point. If I do my job correctly, what you'll gain in the following pages will be a better and clearer understanding of who God is. You'll learn about my flight to Heaven, about how and why Heaven miraculously transformed me. Not only that, but you'll also better understand how you can successfully interact with the loving God who created you. Not so incidentally, you will also know how you, too, can prepare for Heaven. Heaven is real. And the God of the Bible is who this earth-life is all about.

Most assuredly, I say to you, he who hears My word and believes in Him who sent Me has everlasting life, and shall not come into judgment, but has passed from death into life (John 5:24).

Even if you remain unbelieving of what I saw, heard, and learned, you just might come to believe that something changed me. And perhaps there is inspiration in that.

Sharing such a personal and revolutionary experience as I do in this book is challenging. I would also like to give a word of caution. A testimony is a person's personal story of what happened to them. It cannot, nor should it ever, supersede God's Word, which is the absolute truth and the final authority.

Thank you for reading. Settle in for the amazing trip we are about to embark upon. Though I would not ask you to disengage your mind, I would like to ask you to read with an open heart. If you'll do that, I think you'll be wonderfully surprised at what God has stored up for you.

CHAPTER 1

THE LAST FLIGHT

It was an especially gorgeous night to fly. Clear skies, cool temperatures, and visibility in excess of fifty miles. After departing Omaha, Nebraska, in the Boeing 727 narrow-body trijet with 139 passengers plus a crew of six, we were on schedule toward Los Angeles International Airport (LAX). This was the last leg of a four-day trip.

The first officer spoke into his headset: “Roger, direct Denver as filed, maintain flight level three four zero. One thirty-three point six five, TWA four fourteen.”

To me, being part of the flight crew of a major US airline was nothing short of a miracle. You see, more than ten years earlier I had been a passenger and only survivor of a horrific and ironic airplane crash that the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) had declared “non-survivable.”

At the scene of the crash site, paramedics had resuscitated my lifeless body—at least temporarily. Once at the hospital, I remained in a coma for three days. During this time, I visited Heaven. On the morning of the fourth day, I awoke forever changed with a profound understanding of things I had never learned on earth. There was also an unmistakable call of God on my life. How could I go back to living a “normal” life with all that had occurred?

Sitting in the cockpit, I reflected on that traumatic event and the aftermath. My injuries were so massive—the medical team was clear—I would never fly again because I’d never be able to walk again or use my left arm or see from my right eye. And those were just a few of my injuries. Yet after a decade of rehabilitation and retraining, here I was, flying for Trans World Airlines (TWA). That was indeed miraculous!

While flying for the airlines, I also ran my own aviation business. Along with my wife, Paula, I had started a jet pilot training, jet charter, and jet sales corporation in Southern California. Our clients were Hollywood film producers, movie stars, politicians, well-known musicians, and large company CEOs. God abundantly blessed us through our business.

At the same time, Paula and I were raising two growing kids and volunteering as youth ministers at church. We were more than busy, but our lives were entirely fulfilling.

As an offering to the Lord for all He had done to restore my life, Paula and I donated flight services, aircraft, and our time and energy to ministry outreach and various humanitarian needs. With God’s help, we provided medical and dental support, food, clothing, as well as Bibles and gospel tracts to the needy in many countries. God also made a way for us to build several churches and an orphanage.

A special highlight was spending two summers ministering to the Aguaruna tribe in the jungles of northern Peru alongside medical missionary Dr. Larry Garman. There, God had us build a medical clinic, and we helped provide spiritual and nutritional training to the indigenous people. Most importantly, the simple gospel message of Jesus was shared anywhere and everywhere.

Whatever God blessed us with, we were honored to use to bless others. As a result, millions heard the gospel message and tens of thousands became followers of Jesus Christ.

I was jarred out of my reminiscing by a sound at the cockpit door. Knock. Knock... Knock.

Someone in the cabin crew was requesting access with the secret knock that flight crew use to let those in the cockpit know it's "friendly." Swinging the door open, I went back to my duties.

"Hello, gentlemen." Suzanne, the head flight attendant, was checking in. "Captain, we're about to begin meal service. Any turbulence or cautions I should know about?"

I gave Suzanne the update, and as she turned to leave the cockpit, she slowed just enough to slap me on the shoulder and playfully push the back of my head as she walked out the door. You see, Suzanne and I grew up together. We were dear friends since the sixth grade, and we both graduated from Western High School in Anaheim, California. Strangely, we found ourselves working for Howard Hughes's pet company—TWA.

I loved this job—not only for the challenge of flying 209,000 pounds of machinery at over 500 mph through thin air, but also for the comradery of a company of employees striving for aviation excellence.

Ahead and slightly to our right, the brilliant and stunning lights of Las Vegas, Nevada, became visible. Especially on a clear night, there's nothing quite like those lights. From a high altitude, the city, which is surrounded by a desert of black nothingness, appears as an oasis. Millions of bright and colorful lights are compressed into a concentrated area, forming a colorfully lit city in its center.

Astronauts on the International Space Station (ISS) observe and photograph numerous metropolitan areas over the planet. The Vegas Strip, with its brightly lit hotels and casinos, is reputed to be the brightest concentration of light on earth.

Again, my mind wandered back to my visit to Heaven. The lights of Las Vegas pale in comparison with the unimaginable beauty of the light there. Heaven's light comes from a singular source, yet the entire city is bathed in an opaque whiteness that is more intense than the sun but doesn't hurt a person's eyes when gazing into it. Every color ever created exists in Heaven's dazzling light. As wonderful as the beauties of earth are, they are at best a weak imitation of the majesty of Heaven. That eternal image of the golden city of Heaven is forever embedded in my heart and mind.

Flying level at 34,000 feet, we passed Las Vegas and reduced our speed to 460 mph as we began a gradual descent into LAX. I scanned the dials and adjusted the overhead rheostat light used to illuminate my approach descent checklist.

Suddenly, from just behind my head, I heard quiet yet powerful words: "Dale, this is your last flight."

The voice startled me. I knew I had locked the cockpit door! I quickly turned my head to see who was behind me. No one was there. I glanced toward the other pilots as the possible source, but they were busily preparing for approach and landing. Besides, they were in front of me, not behind me.

Who said that? I reached over to feel the door latch with my fingers, verifying the door was indeed closed and locked. My mind was spinning. Cupping my hand around my mouth, I whispered, “God...was that You?” I waited, listening intently. Nothing.

Struggling to concentrate, I forced my attention back to the descending aircraft. As I was setting the pressurization controls for the destination airport, there it was again.

“Dale, this is your last flight...for TWA.” That same voice! Just behind me. I spun around. Again, no one was there.

Now there was no doubt who had spoken. It was the familiar still, small voice of God. He had spoken to my heart. However, this time I heard every word so distinctly it was as if I were hearing with both my ears and my heart.

I was reminded of Samuel in the Bible when God spoke to him as a young man. Samuel thought a person was calling him until he realized it was God. That night in the Boeing 727 was just such an occasion.

My thoughts raced, trying to evaluate what was happening. Why would God say those words? He had miraculously restored everything I had lost in the crash. It was a testimony of God’s power and my faith that I was flying for one of the world’s premier airlines after all the injuries and rehabilitation I had been through.

Why would He say this was my last flight for TWA? That’s crazy. After answering my prayers and giving me my vocational dreams, why would He ask me to give them up? It made no sense.

It would take years to fully understand what actually happened that night. But, yes, that was my last flight. Not my last flight as a pilot. But it was my last flight with TWA. God had other plans for my life, and as you read further, you will learn about the astonishing ramifications of the words spoken in the cockpit that night.

VISITING HEAVEN

First, I must take you back to when everything changed. Back to the time when my life was turned upside down by an airplane crash and a visit to Heaven. Only then will you understand how visiting Heaven taught me how to live a life without limits.

But this book isn't just about my story. It's also about you. Because you, too, can learn to live a life without limits. Are you ready?

Let's go back to the beginning.

JULY 18, 1969—HOLLYWOOD-BURBANK, CALIFORNIA

Early in the morning on July 18, 1969, I boarded a commuter airplane with two other pilots. I was just nineteen—a brash young pilot in flight training. I settled into the right seat to fly as copilot. Gene, whom I was meeting for the first time, would fly in the left seat. And Chuck Burns, the pilot in charge, would sit on a temporary third seat between and slightly behind the two cockpit chairs.

Chuck was my mentor. He had taken me under his wing to help me reach my dream of becoming a commercial airline pilot. I handled the tasks Chuck didn't want to do—like loading the cargo and pre-fighting the aircraft—so I could build flight hours. Chuck was the guy I wanted to be. I not only looked up to him, but we had also become great friends.

The sun was just coming up as the engines roared to life. It was a beautiful, clear day. A perfect day for flying. As our airplane began to taxi, Chuck and I both noticed that Gene was shaky on the controls. Chuck abruptly tapped me on the shoulder and motioned for us to change places. I was disappointed not to be in the cockpit where I could log flight time, but without hesitation, I unbuckled and climbed into the jump seat so Chuck could take the right seat. The aircraft raced down the runway and lifted into the air.

Moments later we became newspaper headlines. Just after takeoff, we violently crashed into a concrete and marble seven-story-high mausoleum, which ironically had been erected in memory of famous and deceased aviators. It is called the Portal of the Folded Wings Shrine to Aviation and stands in the middle of Valhalla Memorial Park Cemetery.

The twin-engine Piper Navajo struck the mausoleum five feet from the top of its brightly tiled dome. The report from the NTSB said we collided at an official impact speed of 135 miles per hour. On impact, our airplane shattered into thousands of pieces, sending all three of us slamming head-on into the solid building. We were then catapulted into a free fall, resulting in a bone-crushing impact with the ground seven stories below.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

CAPT. DALE BLACK is a former airline pilot who has dedicated his career to professional pilot training, aviation safety, and missionary aviation. He has flown for over 40 years with 18,000+ hours of experience in a variety of commercial jets, as well as many corporate jets and general aviation aircraft. Dale is a former FAA Boeing 737 and ATP Flight Examiner, Safety Consultant, Accident Prevention Counselor, and a recipient of the Wright Brothers Master Pilot Award.

Dale has a BA degree from Point Loma Nazarene University. He has an earned MA in Theology and a PhD in Business. He was founder and CEO of a jet pilot training and jet aircraft sales company near Hollywood-Burbank, CA. For more than 30 years, Dale was a jet aircraft manager, and personal flight instructor, for executives and celebrities.

Dale married his college sweetheart, Paula, and they have two grown children. When Paula was diagnosed with terminal cancer and given 3 to 6 months to live, Dale turned his aviation accident research skills toward uncovering the root causes of cancer. As a result, and with God's healing power, Paula permanently reversed the cancer without chemo, radiation, or drugs. That was over 25 years ago. Her inspirational story is written in her book, Life, Cancer and God.

Eventually, Dale sensed God's leading to sell his multimillion-dollar business and their homes, to become fully dependent on God's provision. They sold, or gave away, all earthly possessions to follow the call that Dale describes as "total surrender... total obedience...total dependence." With those funds they founded an orphanage, built churches and medical clinics, and have led hundreds of teams around the world distributing Bibles and medical aid and spreading the gospel of Jesus Christ. Up until the printing of this book, Dale and Paula have given back every dollar of salary and all book royalties to further the gospel message of Jesus Christ.

In the book, Dale and Paula describe their journey from advanced-stage cancer to complete recovery and vibrant health. This faith-based story is destined to be one you’ll read more than once and want to share with others.

Prepare to laugh, cry, hold your breath, and shout for joy as you accompany this husband and wife on their incredible journey of faith, where personal struggles interact with biblical insight. Learn how Paula defied medical logic, cured terminal cancer permanently, and got her life back.

Capt. Dale Black has flown as a commercial pilot all over the world, but one flight changed his life forever—an amazing journey to Heaven and back. Hold on to your seat as you experience the heart-stopping flight over Zambia to the officially declared “non-survivable” airplane crash.

Hovering between life and death for three days, Dale experienced a wondrous journey to Heaven that will astound you. Against all odds, Dale miraculously survived, then contrary to medical prognosis, miraculously recovered from life-threatening injuries to fulfill his dream to fly again.

This “life after death” true story is both a page-turner and a faith-builder. The author does not commercialize his experience of Heaven but tells it in a humble and reverent way while using breathtaking descriptions. I have recommended this book to my entire church.

I purchased this book as a gift for my dad, a retired airline captain, but soon discovered I couldn't put it down. Both of us are professional pilots and we easily rate it 5 stars. The aviation aspects of the book are professional and technically accurate, yet the emphasis throughout is on a loving God. We think the book is a masterpiece and could be enjoyed by everyone, pilot or not.
